

ERGONOMICS EVALUATION (EE)

What is it?

An objective evaluation of;

- Job, role or task design and methods
- Physical work environment and equipment, tools and demands
- How client performs the job or tasks
- Areas of potential health risk with areas of concern prioritised
- The potential for modifications and adjustments to the job, or task, to enable the client to continue in the job, role or task

Who is it for?

Clients who remain in employment, or are seeking a return to their pre-accident role, who need specialist advice to ensure that work tasks and the environment, are optimally designed to prevent any risk of further injury or exacerbation of their condition.

What does the service offer?

- A worksite visit to assess the job role or task, identify measure and documents, any risk factors associated with the job design, working methods, environment and the individual's performance of job tasks
- Face-to-face interview with client to evaluate individual performance of job
- Assessment to confirm injury/condition and current status in order to inform the evaluation
- Provision of a concise report with recommendations
- Identification of recommended modifications, implementation costs and suppliers
